

East Prussia "Amberland" Stage of Russian-German Hostilities

Washington, D. C., Dec. 15.—The National Geographic Society today gave out the following statement concerning the amber-bearing district and the lake district of East Prussia, which affords a picture of conditions in one of the most important parts of the eastern theatre of the European War.

Samland is an unsung strip of coastless plain from which the whole known world has purchased for centuries. It is the heart of ancient amberland, and it has remained unknown to the ultimate consumers of its product from early Phoenician times down to the present day. It still supplies the bulk of the world's amber, and the pipe-stem or cigar-holder or jewel that is of this fragrant, translucent substance, was formerly gathered in the sand dunes or on the beaches, in the sand dunes or from low water around this peninsula. Samland is an oblong arm of East Prussia, eighteen miles in length, and reaching out forty-three miles toward the Baltic Sea. It lies some 100 miles from the Russian frontier, and the soldiers of Russia who recently have been fighting in the most stretches first drew attention toward it.

Königsberg, the capital of East Prussia and the central amber market, is situated at the southwest corner of the amber producing territory upon the Prussian River. Much of the amber produced is worked in Königsberg, and quantities are sent to Vienna, where it is manufactured into all sorts of smoking accessories. Amber beads form an especially large item in the Königsberg trade, and are chiefly sold to the Poles, Russians and people of the East. There is a superstition among the folk of Russia and Poland that amber beads worn by an infant make it sleep easier, and that amber beads worn by the baby's nurse draw all evil away from their charges, thus guarding the baby's health. So it is that one hardly ever sees a Polish or west-Prussian nurse without heavy chains of these ornaments.

Amber, the gem of the East, has its mysterious virtues, or at least has been largely owing. According to ancient lore, it was the substance of the tears of the sisters of the incompetent sunbeams, Phæton, who, after their brother's death, were changed to poplars. The old Greeks and Romans set an immense value upon it, and in the days when Scythia and the Alps marked the ends of the earth, Greece and Persia traded with Samland's amber bearers.

Even today amber is sold because of its mystic qualities. The people of the East value it as a staff of proper potency for amulets, and amber charms against death, disease and the devil are made in practical Prussian markets. Tales of Milletus, an ancient Greek philosopher, first of the physicians, established the mystic powers of amber, and incidentally dabbled in electricity, when he found that it would attract things after a little rubbing. From history's dawn to the present day, many people have had faith in amber's curative properties. As a medicine, it has been worn around the neck and taken dissolved in alcohol. It is needless to say that modern medicine takes little note of amber "cures."

Amber was one of the principal things which served to keep a sturdy curiosity alive in the breasts of the Phoenician, the Greek and the Roman concerning the dreary north. The greatest supply of this product is found on the coasts of the Baltic where the coniferous trees of amber-resin grow in ages past, and most of it comes from Samland. Inferior ambers are found elsewhere in the world; some are found in the green sands of New Jersey; but genuine amber, fragrant when rubbed, comes from Samland and other places along the southern Baltic coast. It occurs in the sand of dunes or in drops. Very rarely lumps have been gathered weighing as much as twelve pounds or more.

"Insects, leaves and flora of a long-decayed world are preserved in many pieces of amber. Pieces containing these insects are very valuable, one perfect leaf having sold for $250.00. A museum at Königsberg has a priceless collection of amber-preserved memorials, containing more than 50,000 specimens.

"A tangled land of marsh and brake, of forests of pine and fir and birch, of canals and sluggish rivers, sprinkled over all with lakes of every size and figure, lakes similar to the great-scooped basins in northern Ohio where summer vacationists go; this is the Masurenland Lake District, which makes up the southern part of the most difficult of military districts to be found upon the war map.

Masurenland is a great natural barrier of marsh and water against the Russian border and a natural defense of her eastern frontier. It is, however, not the dismal country of damp and depression which so many have pictured it to be.

"On the contrary, Masurenland is of such beauty as to deserve many more tourist visitors than have ever wandered there. In summer, it is a region of continuous, unexpected pleasures; an intimate land of little lakes and even country bathed in an air spicy with evergreen tang; of delightful waterside drives, miniature forests in the midst of forest-darkened pools, of wild, wooded, larger waters, and, altogether, of endlessly interesting combinations of water, woodland, sequestered villages and reclaimed fields.

"East Prussia's lake region is worth a visit. It has nothing of the impressive grandeur of the Alps, where one never does get upon familiar terms with surrounding nature, but it is a place—and, in this characteristic, it stands in sharp contrast to the rest of East Prussia—which receives the stranger upon the easy terms of old friendship on his first day out.

"There are many bright pleasure resorts in Masurenland, but the bulk of the visitors come from neighboring Silesia, and the cities of East Prussia and Posen. The Berlin vacationist goes to the North Sea baths, where he needs his follow-up to the capital and where fresh outdoor air may be enjoyed with a proper stir and clamor reminiscent of the city. Masurenland, about the size of the State of Connecticut, with some 4,000 square miles of area and its 'thousand lakes' draws few visitors from east of Danzig or south of Posen.

"Poles migrated in large numbers to this region in the fifteenth century, and of its some 400,000 population, many are the descendants of these early immigrants. These people speak a Polish language which bears about the same relationship to good Polish as Pennsylvania 'dutch' bears to pure German. The Polish peasants live scattered through the marsh and lake lands; the German soldiers are found mostly in the larger cities. Among these cities are Angerburg, Johannisburg, Lonsburg, Loetzen, Lyck, Ortelsburg and Neidenburg.

"Many of the lakes are bound together by canals, and, thus form far-reaching navigable avenues. Lake Spirding is the largest, in fact, the largest inland water sheet in the Prussian Kingdom. It is about 40 square miles in extent and the depth varies to 80 feet.

"Masurenland is frozen over now, freezing occurring between November 16 and December 16. Ice holds until sometime in March, and normally attains a thickness of a foot or more."

BELFORT—One of the best fortified cities of France, 15 miles from the intersection of the borders of Alsace, Switzerland and France. The town commands the valley between the Vosges and the Jura, is located on the Savoureuse river, and is on the roads from Paris to Basel, and Lyons to Strassburg and Mulhausen. Belfort's population and industries were greatly increased by the Alsation immigration following the Franco-Prussian war. At that time Belfort held out against the Germans for three months, the defenders capitulating only upon the receipt of an order to that effect from the government of Paris, two weeks after the fall of the capital. The making of hats, paper, machinery, locomotives and weaving of cotton are among its industries. It has a population of about 30,000.

ST. OMER—An industrial and commercial town of northern France, formerly fortified, on the Aa river, 37 miles north of west of Lille and 28 miles east of Boulogne. The place was formerly a part of Flanders, and was frequently besieged, pillaged and burnt. It has belonged to France since 1877. The inhabitants of one of its suburbs, Haut Pont, speak the old Flemish tongue, wear the quaint costumes and observe the customs of their forefathers. The town's heroism is Jacqueline Robin, who, at the risk of her life, brought provisions into the place, when, owing to famine, it was about to surrender to the French in 1711. Hosiery, textiles, starch, sugar, linen, liquors and beer are manufactured. Its population is about 19,000.

TOURNAI—A French seaport, at the mouth of the river Scheldt, 110 miles west of Paris, about 150 miles southwest of the Belgian border, and 31 miles from the nearest point of England. Next to Marseilles it is the principal seaport of France. The city is in the second class of fortified places, Francis I, Richelieu and Vauban successively planning and building its fundamental defenses. The town, which grew from a village in 1519 of an important seaport. In 1550, underwent numerous sieges and bombardments in the 17th and 18th centuries. Have makes oil, lumber, dyes, chemicals, rope, soap and flour. Its commercial prosperity has kept pace with the rapid increase in importance of its surrounding yards and sugar refineries. The population is approximately 135,000.

MOREUIL—A small town of northern France, 12 miles southeast of Amiens and 35 miles south of west of St. Quentin, on the Aisne river. The town manufactures hosiery and beer, and possesses several brick-works. A large ruined castle and the church and other remains of a Benedictine priory of the 14th century, may be seen there. Moreuil has a population slightly exceeding 3,000, but a few hundred more than its population of a century ago.

ROMILLY-SUR-SEINE—A French town, 65 miles south of east of Paris and 22 miles northwest of Troyes, on the Seine river near where it is joined by the Aube. The town has large factories for the making of caps, stockings and needles, and the machinery necessary for these industries. There are also large iron works, rope works and railway shops located in Romilly. Approximately 1,000 people live there. The place is on the direct line from Paris to Belfort.

FUMAY—A small town of northern France, on the neck of French territory jutting up into Belgium to the southeast of Charleroi. The town is on the left bank of the Meuse, 14 miles north of Charleville, picturesque, situated among wooded heights, two of which, named Dames de la Meuse ("Ladies of the Meuse"), overlooking the river. Besides iron works, Fumay possesses the largest slate quarries in the Meuse valley. Its population is about 7,000.

FOREST NOTES.

Only 7 1/2 per cent of last season's 400 fires in national forests of Utah, southern Idaho, western Wyoming and Nevada caused losses in excess of $100.

Virginia uses more wood for boxes and crates than any other state, followed by New York, Illinois, Massachusetts and California in the order named.

Those familiar with the eastern mistletoe only have no idea of the great losses due to this parasite in the forests of the west, where it counts next to fire and insects in the amount of damage done.

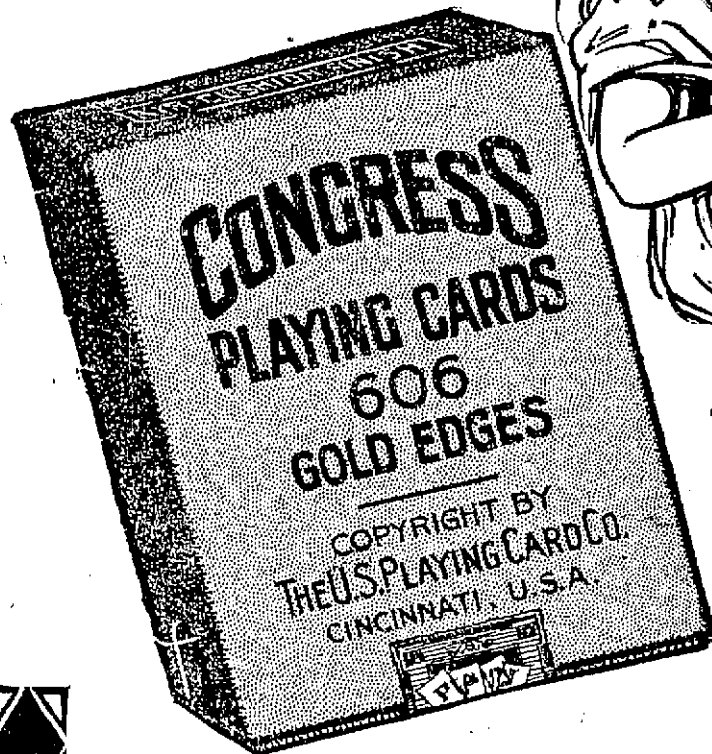

In parts of the west, where trees are scarce, sagebrush is used for fuel. In Nevada the large main stems are trimmed by Indians at $3.00 a cord and delivered to the user at about $6.50. Sage brush burns rapidly and is rather dirty, but produces good heat cured 1,000 copies for distribution among its friends and patrons. Always Easy to Get Spies.
It is an international law, but an unwritten one, that a sovereign cannot lawfully require a subject to serve as a spy, except in a singular case, and that of the last importance. Nevertheless, no country will ever lack spies, for the work that is required of them is so adventurous and so well paid that thousands of men would jump at the opportunity to become a secret service agent.

HERE'S BRITAIN'S NEW FIRST SEA LORD

Sir John Fisher.

Sir John Fisher has just been appointed Great Britain's first sea lord of the admiralty to succeed Prince Louis of Battenberg. He has been admiral of the British fleet since 1905. He was born in 1841 and entered the British naval service when thirteen years old, working his way up through all the grades.

When the British channel fleet was reorganized in 1907 Admiral Fisher had a serious difference with Lord Charles Beresford over its composition. Both the public and the members of parliament took sides in the controversy, and ultimately Lord Charles Beresford was forced out of the fleet.

POVERTY AT HOME.

Because people feel kindly disposed to the noble work of the Red Cross society on European battlefields, and have contributed to that appealing charity; because they have heard the cry of starving, shelterless Belgium, and have sent food and money to relieve a condition of famine and suffering unparalleled in modern history, that does not release from responsibility for exemption to mitigate human misery that lies near at hand.

This is a sharp, cold winter. For those who are used to a warm and clear air and the temperature in the vicinity of zero. But think of what it means in barn-like houses where mothers and children whose hard lot is poverty have scanty fare and insufficient clothing and are obliged to be sparing in the use of fuel, while the father of the family is sick, or out of employment and "looking for a job."

Jobs are not easy to find this winter as they were in the summer. Till the sick man grows well, till the unemployed is at work again—so long as there is dire suffering in Janesville that can be relieved by financial aid—it is incumbent upon all who are fortunate in a position to bestow bounty to remember that "Charity begins at home," and that while it is right and beautiful for them to lessen some of the suffering afar off, it is peculiarly their duty to minister to the needs of those about them.

With winter set in and Christmas near at hand there is a field worthy the attention of benevolent citizens right here in Janesville by aiding the Christmas committee of the Associated Charities in bringing cheer to many families.

QUICK PROSPERITY.

The short session of the sixty-third congress promises to be a stormy session, and President Wilson has already discovered that his sagacious majority, in both houses, will bear watching. Several of his appointments are being held up by the senate because he assumed the responsibility of selecting his own candidates and ignoring senatorial recommendations.

Three of his pet measures, strongly endorsed in his message, are also held up, and he is given to understand that while he has been the autocrat of his party for the past two years, that his brief term of personal power is at an end. This is the game of politics, as it is usually played, and Mr. Wilson is new at the game.

There are Wilson democrats, and then there are others. The Wilson men have had their innings, and now "the others" propose to take a hand. Seventeen of this class represent Tammany in the lower house of congress. These men come from a state which opposed Wilson's nomination, and they have not yet forgotten the drubbing received at the hands of the Baltimore convention.

Mr. Cleveland had a similar experience, during his administration. Like Mr. Wilson, he took matters into his own hands, by assuming to be greater than his party, but there came a day of reckoning, and party defeat resulted.

President Wilson is in for a trip over the same stony road, and lack of endorsement, as shown at the recent election, marks the beginning of the end. The deficiency tax, known as the war tax, is the most unpopular measure ever passed. The $100,000,000 which it is expected to produce, is needed to make good the shortage caused by democratic extravagance and inefficiency. The people are ready for a change now, and will so voice their sentiments in 1916.

QUICK PROSPERITY.

One reads of the many get-rich-quick swindlers that are playing on the unsuspecting public from time to time. Of the wonderful "strikes" in gold mines where the precious metal runs like water out of the veins tapped by the miners. Tales are told of raising shrunken treasure or finding the hidden hoards of pirates of former days, but it remains for Leslie's Weekly to suggest now, "Get prosperity quickly" by giving good sound advice as follows: "It is inconceivable that the working masses of this country cannot appreciate what the prosperity of the railroads means to them. The dry statistics of the annual reports of our railroads interest very few. Yet they are of vital moment to those who do any thinking."

Take one railroad, for instance, the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, an old and prosperous corporation, and note in its annual report one single fact among a number of interest, and that is that the decline in net earnings and the enormous increase in taxes compelled it to set aside for betterments $2,000,000 less than had been applied for improvements the previous year. This $2,000,000, if the railroad had had it, would have been expended for iron and steel construction and equipment, and 60 per cent of it would have gone to labor. This is only one of hundreds of railroads that have been compelled to curtail expenditures to the narrowest limits.

"A competent authority estimates that if the Interstate Commerce Commission would give the railroads a fair increase in rates, and if local authorities would cease to oppress them with new taxes, the railway corporations of this country would prepare at once, to spend on an average, $3,000,000 a day continuously for five years to put their properties in the best condition to handle business economically."

"While we are congratulating ourselves over reports that the warring nations abroad have sent orders for war material to this country aggregating $200,000,000 let us stop and think how little this is in comparison with what our own railroads would be willing to spend if they were restored. In one year they would expend $1,000,000,000 or five times the amount of all the orders for war materials of which we have been boasting. The railroads would pay out this $200,000,000 in less than three months and continue at this rate for a period of five years."

"What would this mean to business men, to keepers of shops, large and small, and to the vast army of employed and unemployed workmen? What would it mean to the dinner pail and the pay envelope? Isn't it time that we thought of these things seriously?"

It is simply a question of mathematics whether one can make five dollars do the purchasing power of ten dollars at the present giving of times. The average head of the family gives up in despair and would be thankful for a pair of carpet slippers at Christmas and money enough the first of the following month to pay the taxes and meet the monthly bills—that is if he can. If not he agrees with the quarrelsome bachelor, that Christmas is a hum-bug after all. He forgets, however, that to the children Christmas is the one festival of the year and in thinking of that he must not forget that there are two hundred little people in Janesville who will not have Christmas unless he aids them with a financial contribution to the Associated Charities.

Well, the members of congress have learned that the navy is not equipped for a good-sized conflict, so what are they going to do about it? Sit back and make further appropriations for Salt Creek, while the most of them will go when the voters get a chance to buy powder and shell so that we may be prepared if we should have to use powder and shot to enforce our neutrality.

Russia and Germany appear to be playing a game of checkers with Poland as the checker board. First Russia advances and gains wonderful victories. Then Germany takes a hand and drives the Russian foe back and captured thousands of cannon, and so it goes. Meanwhile poor Poland is suffering just as Belgium is in the west.

Splitting the infinitive might have been passed unnoticed by the general public in the messages to congress of Roosevelt or Taft, but in one from Wilson, college professor and stickler for studious diplomatic relations with all nations it is unpronounceable.

The Dresden seems to be like the cat with nine lives. It has escaped a whole fleet of English war vessels and is now safe in a harbor coaling up and ready for another dash against the foe when the time comes.

The Dardanelles have been pierced by an English submarine that stole in under water and sank a Turkish cruiser right under the guns of the forts of the Sultan. Will wonders never cease?

Fake Hog of the Sea.
The slab-sided, flat-bottomed fluke, is not a game fish, but he is muscular, and when he decides to bore down to the bottom his flat shape aids him in giving a good account of himself. He is the hog of the sea, although he prefers that which is alive. After being hooked the fluke will lie still and not move until the angler notices him by hauling upward. Then the fluke gets busy.

A New View.
"What a nice, kind man Nero was!" "What? Why, the wretch killed while Rome burned?" "I know it. He'd probably waited all his life for a chance when he wouldn't disturb any one."

WOODMAN'S SAW GUIDE

Enables One Man to Do Work Formerly Requiring Two Persons.

The saw guide shown herewith is the invention of a lumber camp man from the far Northwest, but it will be found of great value to the amateur or professional woodman of any part of the country. The big "two-man saw" is in more or less frequent use about any farm or suburban place and in bringing down a tree trunk it would greatly facilitate the task if it were not for certain limitations. For instance, it will go through an ordinary tree trunk much more rapidly than an axe, but on account of the upright position of the tree it is difficult to guide the saw through the wood in making a level cut. The services of two men are necessary, one

GUIDES THE SAW THROUGH THE TREE TRUNK. at either end of the saw, which is another drawback. This guide, which has been patented, enables one man to do the work. The guide not only assists very materially in holding the saw in a level position, but dispenses with one person, enabling a single man to operate it easily. The guide rests on a step which is cut out of the trunk with a few chops of the axe, and then it is very readily adjusted for work. The handle on the business end of the saw is turned at an angle with the blade, so that its manipulation is further facilitated.

Recovering Rapidly.
When the doctor came down from seeing her husband he told her that her good man would shortly be on the road to convalescence. "What's that?" she asked. "I mean he will be getting better," said the doctor. "You will know because he will get irritable—extremely so." When he called the next day the doctor found the devoted woman as happy as a sandboy, smiling and singing to herself. "And how are we today?" he asked. "Oh, he's getting better all right," she answered. "He came down to the kitchen this morning and threw a coffee pot at the cook, and shot our old house dog because it wouldn't say 'Please!' So I cooked him a dish of tripe and onions and he has gone back to work. It's wonderful how you doctors know things!"

Toll.
If you want knowledge, you must toll for it, if food, you must toll for it, and if pleasure, you must toll for it. Toll is the law, pleasure comes through toll, and not by self-indulgence and indolence. When a man gets to love work his life is a happy one.—Selected.

How Indians Sleep Warm.

The Indian, according to a writer about camp life, resorts to two methods to keep warm while asleep. If it is not unduly cold, he lights a rather large fire and warms the earth, then rakes away the coals, lies down and pulls his blanket over him. In colder weather, besides this, he heats a big boulder, covers it lightly with earth, and curls himself around it. He never wraps himself in the blanket, but uses it exclusively as a covering.

MAY RENT QUARTERS FOR A WAITING ROOM

CIVIC COUNCIL TAKES ACTION TUESDAY ON PUBLIC CLUB ROOMS FOR WOMEN.

CITY BUILDING BALKED

Legal Entanglement Will Prevent Municipal Station Being Erected at Corn Exchange.

At a meeting of the civic council at the library Tuesday afternoon it was definitely announced that the city proposed project of erecting a public room and municipal building on the property owned by it at the Corn Exchange is out of question, owing to certain legal entanglements under the terms of which the property was given to the city by the donor.

Other plans for a woman's club room and meeting place were discussed, however, and it was suggested that three rooms, centrally located, be rented, a matron provided, conveniences installed and the quarters opened to the public at the earliest possible date. A. S. Klotz, president of the Civic Council, announced that there were three such rooms available and that they could be secured for a reasonable rental.

Mr. Klotz pointed out that this plan would be more economical for the city, which would be relieved not only of the expense of building but the cost of upkeep of a public property. While the quarters which the council had in mind have not been permanently bargained for, there was no doubt about the council being able to secure them on reasonable terms.

Members of the Civic League, of whom there were fifteen or twenty at the meeting, were enthusiastic over the new plan, as they feel that such quarters must be provided and as soon as possible. Even if the city should build out the matter of its right to build at the Corn Exchange in the courts, it was thought that some temporary rooms should be furnished and the plan given a trial.

It was the opinion of the members of the Civic League that the institution shall be something more than a rest room, although that feature will not be lost sight of. They will rather be a central meeting place open to all women, not only of Janesville and vicinity, but for the entire county. Women shoppers from out of town will find such a place most convenient. Books and magazines will be provided and every effort will be put forth to make the rooms attractive.

Secretary McDowell and another representative of the Commercial Club attended the meeting yesterday. The Commercial Club has made offers as to financing the proposition and moreover is anxious to see the importance of such an accommodation.

Rest rooms and public club rooms for women are fast becoming popular the country over. It was pointed out by the advocates of the school in Wisconsin such quarters are found in Beloit, Whitewater, La Crosse, Eau Claire, Madison, Kenosha and Oshkosh. Among the larger cities St. Louis, Denver, Seattle and Trenton, N. J., are thus provided.

MUCH MONEY RAISED BY COMMITMENT LAW

Over Sixteen Thousand Dollars Earned by Paroled Men Under State Commitment Law in Rock County.

From August 1st, 1913, until the present date, the commitment law as exercised in Rock county has resulted in the prisoners earning a total of $16,775.55, of which amount the dependants of the paroled person received $10,375.81, the county $1,210.41 and $6,188.40 has been expended for the necessities of life for the prisoners. These figures demonstrate the success of the law through the efforts of Sheriff C. S. Whipple, who has given the law a thorough study and administration.

Considering that the paroling of county jail prisoners under the commitment law is but an experiment in this state, the record made by Sheriff Whipple, the best in the state, is amazing. Under the old system county jail prisoners were confined to serve their terms and as a result the families of the prisoners were forced to suffer to a greater measure than the men themselves. The figures were compiled today by Sheriff Whipple on the request of Henry A. Huber, the framer and promoters of the law in the state legislation.

Rock county was the first to adopt the law and put into active practice and in very few counties of the state has the method been tried. That results from the paroling of the jail inmates have been for reaching cannot be denied, for reform has been accomplished in a majority of the cases. While the time has been limited, cases of delinquent men, now working steadily and providing for their families have been numerous. The cases of vagrancy of county residents have decreased wonderfully and "floaters" or tramps that usually inhabit Janesville or Beloit have learned to give the county a wide berth.

The financial benefit to the dependants of the convicted men is the most appreciable result of the law for a number of families in the county, who heretofore were county aids, now are independent of charity. The greatest problem that hinder the law from a complete success is the habitual drunkard and the releasing of prisoners convicted for the more serious charge, including larceny. Sheriff Whipple this morning stated that the law is weak in dealing with the "repeaters" or habitual drunkards for there is no means of controlling them effectively. What is needed is a county workhouse where this class of men could be imprisoned, made to work and earn means to provide support for their dependants.

"We have had a few prisoners violate their parole by running away from the places where they were sent to work. Five have been sent to the penitentiary for escaping. Other county officials and Chief of Police Champion have endorsed a change in the law whereby the court could specify a certain portion of a man's term to be served in the jail and what would be the parole feature. This, they say, would tend to enforce on the prisoner's mind the idea of punishment in case of a repeat offense. At present the court has the feature of the law which prohibits liquor dealers selling to the commitment law prisoners is also advocated.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

CHRISTMAS WITH A LONG "I"

If we pronounce the "I" in Christmas long instead of short, I wonder if we should still be able to forget and ignore the meaning of the day so completely as many of us seem to do. Christmas is the anniversary of Christ's birthday. That is a perfectly simple and obvious fact (although, being, most of us, openly). But how many people really sense that fact? And how many people live it into their holiday season?

Love is the first law of the Lord of Christmas. Though we wear ourselves out sewing, embroidering, knitting and all the rest; though we spend our last penny and bankrupt ourselves for weeks to come on Christmas gifts; though we consider our friends tastes and give them the things they like and not what we like or think is good for them; though we tie up our bundles with plenty of red ribbon and holly and forget not the Red Cross stamps; though we painstakingly remember the poor; though we do all these things and do not put the spirit of love and happiness and peace and good will into our Christmas gifts, we have assuredly failed to celebrate the King's Birthday as He would wish.

Suppose this year we make a greater effort than usual not to forget what all this celebration is about. In our preparation for the day, in the tired-outness of the night before, through all the excitement of the day itself and through the difficult anti-climax of the day after, let's try not to lose sight of the fact that this isn't just gift-giving day, but Christmas—with a long "I".

Let's determine that we will put an extra guard on our tongues and not let slip a single unkind or impatient word through all the Christmas season. "Peace on Earth, Good will to all men" is the message of our Christmas. Let's permit this to be a season of hungry and kind friendships renewed, of greater courtesy and kindness towards those with whom we come into casual contact, of unusual consideration for those who are in need of special tenderness and sympathy. Let's give of our hearts but whose very nearness makes us careless of expression.

"Love me and tell me so sometimes," says Gail Hamilton. Could there be a better time to tell it than the season that is sacred to the Lord of Love.

Heart and Home Problems

Heart and Home PROBLEMS. Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young gentleman of seventeen. Are we old enough to be out after 10 o'clock at night? (2) It is proper for a young fellow to slap a fellow when he goes to kiss her? (3) Is it fashionable to comb the hair pompadour? (4) Should checkered vests and neckties be worn, or are they too loud? (5) Is it proper for a fellow to go with a girl of fourteen? HIRAN AND HANK. (1) Boys of that age should be at home in good season. (2) There are more dignified approval of any sort is better than disapproval if the young man treats her so discourteously. (3) The pompadour is very much worn this winter. (4) Avoid loud dressing of any sort. (5) Girls of fourteen are too young to have any gentleman company.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Will you please tell me how to clean a tan corduroy dress with velvet collar? (2) How can I clean white kid on a shoe? (3) Will white kid top on black patent leather shoes be out of place this winter for ladies or could I make the top the gray shade they are wearing so much and how? (4) Could you tell me how to clean galvanized iron below a gas stove? (5) Remove dust by heating; then rub with benzine; be careful that no flame is in the room. After drying, rub with alcohol on soft rug; working on rain spots especially, working against the grain. Then steam the dress to raise the nap. Hang it in the bathroom over the tub on a line. Then turn on the hot water until the room is full of steam. The water must be near the boiling point. Let it stay shut in, till the steam cools. It must not be handled till it is dry. You can freshen the velvet collar, if it is soiled, by applying chloroform. This is a regular white kid cleaner and it is very good. If the shoe is not very dirty, benzine will clean it. Rub carefully with a soft woolen cloth. (3) I should color the tops as you suggest. Take tube paint, such as artists use, thin with turpentine and apply with a soft brush very evenly. If tan kid is wanted, mix 10 drops of tincture of saffron with three tablespoons of olive oil. Clean shoes well as soiled places will show, then rub mixture on with flannel cloth. Two coats will be sufficient. (4) Apply oxalic acid. Do not use fingers, as it makes the fingers ends sore. Let it stand until it is bleached to the color you want. Wash with ammonia water.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Please print a recipe for peanut butter. THANK YOU. Make a salad dressing as follows: One rounded tablespoon butter, one-third of a cup of vinegar, one-half cup of oil, one-half cup of milk and let it boil up. Set pan in hot water on stove. Beat an egg; put it in one-half cup vinegar and stir well. Add to mixture on stove one rounded teaspoon mustard, one tablespoon salt, two tablespoons sugar, and stir well. Then add the egg and vinegar and let it boil up. When cold, put peanuts through chopper and stir into the salad dressing until it is thick.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: If one receives the announcement of former acquaintances who have moved away, is any acknowledgment expected? I only knew the couple slightly, as we worked together in the same church. M. M. T.

No acknowledgment is necessary, but it is always courteous to send good wishes to the bride. If she ever moves back to your city you should call if you care to renew the acquaintance.

THE TABLE. Stuffed Green or Red Peppers—One-half dozen red peppers; cut tops off; let soak in water 15 minutes. Take one pound fresh pork ground with piece of suet; one-half cup rice boiled 10 minutes (cold before using); grana one onion; and one egg; mix well together and fill peppers. Turn one can tomatoes over peppers, let boil till tender; when done take peppers out; strain tomatoes through a sieve (only seeds should be left), then place peppers back again and warm up ready to use. Fill green peppers (not red) same way and boil in saucekraut.

FOLDING EGG COOKER. Plunge and Removal from Water Made With Accuracy. Most persons are rather fastidious about their boiled eggs, and to such the matter of a few seconds one way or the other in the cooking operation means a great deal. A new egg-cooker which has been recently patented has for its object absolute accuracy in the timing of the boiling process, so that with little care it is possible to give the eggs the exact amount of heat demanded. Another feature of this device is that when there is no demand for its services the thing folds up into a compact space. The holder will accommodate six eggs at one time, and the group may be plunged into the hot water at one operation, and when the time has expired they may be withdrawn with the same ease. This prevents the possibility of one egg being cooked longer than another, as is often the case when handled separately. When it is desired to lay the device away each of the individual cups turns around on the handle and slips into the next one, thus economizing space.

KENTUCKY TO HAVE NO ILLITERATES IN 1920. Louisville, Ky., Dec. 16.—Moonlight schools are taking the place of moonlight girls in Kentucky. Members of the Woman's Forward Movement, which has for its object the elimination of illiteracy by means of the "moonlight" schools, showed in their annual report issued today how the number of people in Kentucky who could neither read nor write was steadily decreasing. Progress for the entire elimination of illiteracy among the Kentucky whites in 1920 are exceedingly bright, according to the report. The number of illiterate is now estimated at 208,000.

THE WIFE'S MONEY. "Now, daddy, we have seen all our Christmas things. We are going to take you to see yours," exclaimed two-year-old Frank. "Let's blindfold him," said mamma, producing a muffler. "Here, Edith, fasten it over his eyes, and Frank and Mildred lead him to the study." The children danced over this feat of the program, and after Edith had pinned the muffler in place, the father took her in his arms, and was guided by the two little children, while mamma opened the doors. They led him to a handsome mission desk, then Edith removed the bandage and all watched the father's face. He had expected an array of childish trifles, such as they had prepared for him every year, but the desk, excellent in design and workmanship, filled him with amazement. "What does it mean?" he asked, turning to his wife, whose face was dimpling with happiness. "It's a long story, dear," she answered, "so sit down while we tell it. This desk has been earned by a very little from my allowance. The plans were made early last spring. Each one will tell how his money was earned. Let Edith begin, as she is the eldest."

"Surely, my baby girl, my six-year-old, couldn't earn money for daddy," he said, taking the child on his knee. "Yes, I did," she answered in sweet seriousness. "I picked up potatoes for grandma. He gave me five cents for every basket." "How much did you earn for daddy?" asked the father, giving her a big hug and kiss. "I earned $1.50. I picked up thirty turnips. Is that right, mother?" she asked. "Yes, dear. Here, Jack, is a kodak picture I took of her," and she handed father a photo of the little girl sitting in a potato field.

the teachers cannot always take care of them. So a guide is hired to explain the pictures and historical relics. I was paid by the hour and earned $10," explained mamma. "This is all very wonderful," said her husband. "I never had anything give me so much pleasure in my life. The hours of loving work and the resourcefulness you have shown are the things that count. The desk will always remind me of them as long as I live."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

CANDIES. Apple Cream Fudge—Two cups granulated sugar, one cup boiling water, one-eighth teaspoon cream tartar, whites of two eggs, one apple (grated). Boil sugar, water and cream of tartar till it forms a soft ball in cold water. Have whites of eggs beaten stiff with apple mixture added. Add cooked mixture and beat till quite soft. Then spread in buttered pan and, when cool, cut in squares. Nuts may be added.

This is a delicious frosting for a cake when not beaten so stiff. THINGS WORTH KNOWING. Cleaning Sewing Machine—When you have just a small amount of cream to churn, try putting it into a half gallon fruit jar, put rubber and cover on, wrap in a cloth to avoid slipping around, and let it sit on the treadle of machine. You may then either slip off the band and run machine fast for a few minutes, or place the jar between your feet on the treadle and go on with your sewing and in a few minutes you will have a nice little dish of butter. From one-half to one and one-half pounds may be made this way.

To Save Gas—The average housewife spends 15 times the amount of gas for cooking a meal than is necessary, and at the same time positively injures food values and quality of the article she is cooking. To get the greatest amount of heat units from a gas burner, the flame should not be turned any higher than will give a perfect blue flame. When the flame becomes a yellowish red, you are wasting gas and getting a smudge on your kitchen utensils, but decreases their longevity to one-half. The flame should be about one-half inch of clear blue, and after the flame you are cooking has come to a boiling point, reduce it to a point that will just keep it boiling. This is equally true in the oven. Invariably the gas is turned too high for baking, and the bread or cake is burned. This also means waste of gas and a constant anxiety about the oven, which would not be necessary if gas were used at a lower temperature.

Stocking Help—Take some small snap fasteners, sew one part of fastener on one stocking at the top and the other part on the other stocking at the top. Then when stockings are taken off to put in the wash, have each snap his pair together. It does not interfere with the washing and no clothespins are necessary when they are hung on the line. Best of all, the pairs of stockings are always together. This is very much appreciated where there are several children in the family.

EVERYDAY TALKS TO EVERYDAY PEOPLE

BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

In company with sixty odd million other residents of the U. S. A. you are going to endeavor to hit the bulls-eye of diplomacy in your gift-giving this joyous season. You are not going to buy a "best seller" for father (the one you haven't read) when you know his heart is set on a safety razor; neither are you going to purchase a chafing dish for mother (because all the other girls have one), when you can see in her de-sire-it eyes when you mention pictures just where her fancy lies.

If you are fortunate enough to have your parents still with you—don't deny love, any more than they deny God. You would resent, emphatically, anyone questioning your love for your parents. Prove your regard for them in a substantial way this season; spend a wee bit less on your younger friends, that, in the natural order of events, you will have with you longer, and more on your parents.

If your parents need a practical gift, let the gift be in that line, but do not make the mistake of thinking that elderly people do not enjoy dainty gifts. A subscription to a good paper or magazine is a gift that will keep your kindness before them for the entire year; that will often remind them that though they're old and feeble, there are hearts who do not forget.

When you look for the last time on this earth on the still, calm face of the man or woman who gave the best years of their life in order to fit you for life's battle, it will be the things you left undone, rather than the things you did, that will cause you pain. When Christmas morn is ushered in and the old arm chair, for the first time, is empty, the knowledge of what you did last Christmas will be balm to your lonely heart. For of this be sure. Your heart will be lonely when they leave you, especially at Christmas. You'll look at their place at the table (no one will fill that chair) and with a blinding rush of tears you'll think of the many happy Christmas days that they provided for you, and you'll long with a longing that almost passes belief to have them with you—if only for a very little while—just for that night.

There is a man in our town who years ago lost his only daughter and WOMEN VOLUNTEERS.

In stress and trouble the women of a nation are always to be counted upon. In Serbia the women went to the front with muskets in their hands; they were as strong and brave as the men on the firing line. In this country few of our women escape the weakening troubles peculiar to their sex.

For every disease or ailment of a womanly character, no matter how recent or how long standing, the one reliable remedy of proved merit is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is prepared from nature's roots and herbs and does not contain a particle of alcohol or any narcotic. It is not a secret prescription for its ingredients are printed on the wrapper.

Women are earnestly advised to take it for irregular or painful periods, headache, nervousness, sallow complexion and nervousness. For girls about to enter womanhood, women about to become mothers and for the changing days of midlife, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription should always be on hand. Write Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for free 126 page book on woman's diseases. Every woman should have one.

Home testimony for Doan's Kidney Pills, published in every locality, is of itself convincing evidence of merit. Confirmed testimony forms still stronger evidence. Years ago, a citizen of Janesville gratefully acknowledged the benefit derived from Doan's Kidney Pills. The statement is now confirmed—the proof more convincing. Cases of this kind are plentiful in the work of Doan's Kidney Pills—the record is unique.

Mrs. Emily Hall, 209 Riverside St., Janesville, says: "I suffered terribly from pains through the small of my back for months. I had severe pains in my head and my kidneys didn't act regularly. I was feeling miserable when someone told me of Doan's Kidney Pills. I got a supply at the People's Drug Co. and used two or three boxes. They made me well again. The CALL of the CUMBERLANDS

BY CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK
WITH ILLUSTRATIONS FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF SCENES IN THE PLAY

Smithers turned pale with anger, his fighting face grew as truculent as a bulldog's, while Callomb stood glaring back at him like a second bulldog, but the judge knew that he was being honestly and fearlessly accused. He merely pointed to the door. The captain turned on his heel and stalked out of the place, and the judge came down the steps and crossed the street to the courthouse. Five minutes later he turned to the shirt-sleeved man who was leaning on the bench and said in his most judicial voice:

"Mr. Sheriff, open court."

The next day the mail carrier brought in a note for the temporary judge. His honor read it at recess and hastened across to Hollman's Muncie Department Store. There, in council with his masters, he asked instructions. This was the note:

"The Hon. Asa Smithers. 'Sir: I arrived in this county yesterday, and am prepared, if called as a witness, to give to the grand jury full and true particulars of the murder of Jesse Purdy and the killing of Aaron Hollis. I am willing to come under the escort of my own kinsman, or the militia, as the court may advise. 'The requirement of any bodyguard I deplore, but in meeting my legal obligations, I do not regard it as necessary or proper to walk into a trap. 'Respectfully, 'SAMSON SOUTH.'"

Smithers looked perplexedly at Judge Hollman.

"Shall I have him come?" he inquired.

Hollman threw the letter down on his desk with a burst of blasphemy: "Have him come?" he echoed. "Hell and damnation, no! What do we want him to come here and spill the milk for? When we get ready, we'll indict him. Then, let your damned soldiers go after him—as a criminal, not a witness. After that, we'll continue this case until these outsiders go away, and we can operate to suit ourselves. We don't fall for Samson South's tricks. No, sir; you never got that letter! It miscarried. Do you hear? You never got it."

Smithers nodded grudging acquiescence. Most men would rather be independent officials than collar-wearers.

Out on Misery Samson South had gladdened the soul of his uncle with his return. The old man was mending, and, for a long time, the two had talked. The falling head of the clan looked vainly for signs of degeneration in his nephew, and, failing to find them, was happy.

"Hev ye decided, Samson," he inquired, "that ye was right in yer notion, 'bout goin' away?"

Samson sat reflectively for a while, then replied:

"We were both right, Uncle Spicer—and both wrong. This is my place, but if I'm to take up the leadership it must be in a different fashion. Changes are coming. We can't any longer stand still."

Spicer South lighted his pipe. He, too, in these last years, had seen in the distance the crest of the oncoming wave.

"I reckon there's right smart truth to that," he acknowledged. "I've been studyin' 'bout his considerable myself of late. There's been several fellows through the country talkin' coal an' timber an' railroads—an' sich like."

Sally went to mill that Saturday, and with her rode Samson. There, beside Willie McCager, he met Calob Willey and several others. At first, they received him skeptically, but they knew of the visit to Purdy's store, and they were willing to admit that in part at least he had owned the blot from his escutcheon. Then, too, except for cropped hair and a white skin, he had come back as he had gone, in home-spun and hickory. There was nothing highfalutin in his manners. In short, the impression was good.

"I reckon now that ye're back, Samson," suggested McCager, "an' soon 'in' how yere Uncle Spicer is gettin' along all right, I'll just let the two of ye run things. I've done had enough. It was a stupor fashion of resigning a regency, but effectual."

Old Calob, however, still insurgent and unconvinced, brought in a minor report.

"We wants fightin' men," he grumbled, with the senile reiteration of his age, as he spat tobacco and beat a rattan on the mill floor with his long hickory staff. "We don't want no deserters."

"Samson ain't a deserter," defended Sally. "There isn't one of you fit to tie his shoes." Sally and old Spicer South alone knew of her lover's letter to the circuit judge, and they were pledged to secrecy.

"Never mind, Sally!" it was Samson himself who answered her. "I didn't come back because I care what men like old Calob think. I came back because they needed me. The proof of a fighting man is his fighting, I reckon. I'm willing to let 'em judge me by what I'm going to do."

So, Samson slipped back, tentatively, at least, into his place as clan head, though for a time he found it a post without action. After the fierce outbreak of bloodshed, quiet had settled, and it was tacitly understood that, unless the Hollman forces had some coup in mind which they were secreting, this peace would last until the soldiers were withdrawn.

"When the world's a-lookin'," commented Judge Hollman, "it's a right good idea to crawl under a log—an' lay still."

Purdy had been too famous a feudist to pass unscathed. Reporters came as far as Hixon, gathered there such news as the Hollmans chose to give them, and went back to write lurid stories and descriptions, from hearsay, of the stockaded seat of tragedy. Nor did they overlook the dramatic coincidence of the return of "Wildcat" Samson South from civilization to savagery. They made no accusation, but they pointed an inference and a moral—as they thought. It was a sermon on the triumph of hereditary over the advantages of environment. Adreane read some of these saffron misrepresentations, and they distressed her.

Meanwhile, it came insistently to the ears of Captain Callomb that some plan was on foot, the intricacies of which he could not fathom, to manufacture a case against a number of the Souths, quite apart from their actual guilt, or likelihood of guilt. Once more, he would be called upon to go out and drag in men too well fortified to be taken by the posies and deputies of the Hollman civil machinery. At this news, he chafed bitterly, and still rankling with a sense of shame at the loss of his first prisoner, he formed a plan of his own, which he revealed over his pipe to his first lieutenant.

"There's a nigger in the woodpile, Merriweather," he said. "We are simply being used to do the dirty work up here, and I'm going to do a little probing of my own. I guess I'll turn the company over to you for a day or two."

"What idocy are you contemplating now?" inquired the second in command.

"I'm going to ride over on Misery, and hear what the other side has to say. I've usually noticed that one side of any story is pretty good until the other's told."

"You mean you are going to go over there where the Souths are entrenched, where every road is guarded?" The lieutenant spoke wrathfully and with violence. "Don't be an ass, Callomb. You went over there once before and took a man away—and he's dead. You owe them a life, and they collect their dues. You will be supported by no warrant of arrest, and can't take a sufficient detail to protect you."

"No," said Callomb, quietly. "I go on my own responsibility and I go by myself."

"And," stormed Merriweather, "you'll never come back."

"I think," smiled Callomb, "I'll get back. I owe an old man over there an apology, and I want to see this desperado at first hand."

ter to Old Spicer South. I told him that I was coming unescorted and unarmed and that my object was to talk with him. I asked him to give me a safe conduct, at least, until I reached his house, and stated my case. I treated him like an officer and a gentleman, and, unless I'm a poor judge of men, he's going to treat me that way."

The lieutenant sought vainly to dissuade Callomb, but the next day the captain rode forth, unaccompanied. Curious stares followed him and Judge Smithers turned narrowing and unpleasant eyes after him, but at the point where the ridge separated the territory of the Hollmans from that of the Souths he saw waiting in the road a mounted figure, sitting his horse straight, and clad in the rough habiliments of the mountaineer.

As Callomb rode up he saluted and the mounted figure with perfect gravity and correctness returned that salute as one officer to another. The captain was surprised. Where had this mountaineer with the steady eyes and the clean-cut jaw learned the niceties of military etiquette?

"I am Captain Callomb of 'F' company," said the officer. "I'm riding over to Spicer South's house. Did you come to meet me?"

"To meet and guide you," replied a pleasant voice. "My name is Samson South."

The militiaman stared. This man whose countenance was calmly thoughtful scarcely comported with the descriptions he had heard of the "Wildcat of the Mountains," the man who had come home straight as a storm-petrel at the first note of the trumpet and marked his coming with double murder. Callomb had been too busy to read newspapers of late. He had heard only that Samson had "been away."

While he wondered, Samson went on.

"I'm glad you came. If it had been possible I would have come to you." As he told of the letter he had written the judge, volunteering to present himself as a witness, the officer's wonder grew.

"They said that you had been away," suggested Callomb. "If it's not an important question, what part of the mountains have you been visiting?"

Samson laughed.

"Not any part of the mountains," he said. "I've been living chiefly in New York—and for a time in Paris."

Callomb drew his horse to a dead halt.

"In the name of God," he incredulously asked, "what manner of man are you?"

"I hope," came the instant reply, "it may be summed up by saying that I'm exactly the opposite of the man you've had described for you back there at Hixon."

my people.

The officer leaned in his saddle. "South," he said, "would you mind shaking hands with me? Some day I want to brag about it to my grandchildren."

Callomb spent the night at the house of Spicer South. He met and talked with a number of the kinsmen, and, if he read in the eyes of some of them a smoldering and unforgiving remembrance of his unkept pledge, at least they repressed all expression of censure.

With Spicer South and Samson the captain talked long into the night. He made many jottings in a note book. He with Samson abetting him, pointed out to the older and more stubborn man the necessity of a new regime in the mountains, under which the individual could walk in greater personal safety. As for the younger South, the officer felt, when he rode away next morning, that he had discovered the one man who combined with the courage and honesty that many of his clansmen shared the mental equipment and local influence to prove a constructive leader.

When he returned to the Bluegrass he meant to have a long and unofficial talk with his relative, the governor. The grand jury trooped each day to the courthouse and transacted its business. The petty jurors went and came, occupied with several minor homicide cases. The captain, from a chair, which Judge Smithers had ordered placed beside him on the bench, was looking on and intently studying. One morning, Smithers confided to him that in a day or two more the grand jury would bring in a true bill against Samson South, charging him with murder. The officer did not show surprise. He merely nodded.

He came down the garden path, a sad, sorrowful figure. She watched him with anxious eyes.

"How did father take it?" she asked.

"He took it all right," replied the young man.

"Oh, I am so glad, George!" she cried.

"Are you?" he replied, stopping momentarily by her side. "Well, I can't say that I am, dear. At first your father wouldn't listen to me."

"Why didn't you tell him that you had two thousand five hundred dollars in the bank, as I told you to?" she exclaimed.

"I did, after all else had failed," answered George dejectedly.

"And what did he do then?" "Do!" echoed the young man, passing his hand wearily through his hair. "He borrowed it!"

In the sixth grade the teacher was questioning a boy about Napoleon's disastrous invasion of Russia and the subsequent retreat from Moscow.

"What did the French do then?" she asked.

"They ran away," replied the boy. "Yes, that is what they did," said the teacher, "but 'ran away' is hardly the correct phrase to use. What should you have said?"

The boy's face lighted up with understanding.

"They beat it!" he exclaimed, quite proudly.

Dynamite.

Dynamite, inestimably more powerful than gunpowder, is formed by soaking a solid absorbent substance with nitroglycerin. The best absorbent material is found at Hanover, Germany, and is known as "Kieselguhr." When dried it is a white powder and is said to safely retain more than three times its own weight of nitroglycerin.

Evolution.

If the theory of evolution "has been overthrown" the fact is not generally known. So far from being "overthrown" the theory is stronger today, say the leading scientists, than it ever was. Indeed, so these scientists inform us, the theory of evolution is now accepted by the faculties of the great learned institutions of the world and is taught as part of the general education.—Chicago Examiner.

THERE HAVE BEEN MANY STARTLING DEVELOPMENTS SEEN IN NATIONAL PASTIME OF LATE; FANS WILL HAVE NEXT SUMMER

About Sound Waves.
One of those scientists who are always developing apparent paradoxes in thought has come forward with the statement that sound itself is not a transverse, but exists only because of waves. In other words, if the ears of the human race were removed from the world would be absolutely deafness to humanity. The contention is that the sound waves, traveling at a rate of 1,100 feet a second, create vibrations in the air just as a pond ripples when a rock is thrown into it. The greater the force of these waves the louder the sound. But this is the point where these sound waves strike the sensitive hearing of the ear. Thus, traveling in the original proposition, the air waves themselves would be useless did they not operate in conjunction with the human sense of hearing.
